Annuitants guide - Texas Department of Insurance

Annuitants are sold by life insurance companies. Traditionally, in return for your lump sum premium the insurance company paid you an income. The income was guaranteed for your lifetime. Annuitants paid a higher interest rate than banks could. This was because annuitants and bank deposits were (and are) completely different. When you buy a lifetime annuity, you effectively sell your money for ever in return for an interest rate and lifetime income.
