Christian doctrine, Shirley C. Guthrie

The late scholar Shirley Guthrie, Jr. had a fine answer in his book Christian Doctrine: ‘Strictly speaking, a Christian whose faith is grounded on God’s self-revelation has to say no to this common question—just when he takes the Bible seriously as the Word of God. Our faith is not in a book, but in the God we learn to know in this book.

Quotes about Shirley Guthrie and Christian Doctrine

Guthrie extracts seven specific doctrinal implications of this memory - hope structure of Christian faith in God’s providence: 1, it’s not a doctrine that faith insulates people from suffering; 2, it is a doctrine that the self-giving God is present and active with us in suffering - we aren’t alone in it; 3, God’s presence especially takes the form of human ministry, and that might mean we receive it from other people, and also that we ourselves are called to extend that comfort ...

Christian Doctrine (9) - Matters of Interpretation

Three problems right off the bat: (1) the classical language of Trinitarian doctrine is “meaningless and misleading for most Christians in our time” (72) and requires translation into contemporary terms; (2) interreligious dialogue - the doctrine does make for difficulties, because it does constitute a non-negotiable point of difference, but that’s what makes inter-religious dialogue honest and interesting; (3) feminist critique - Guthrie sees the point in feminist critique, in ...

Christian Doctrine / Edition 1 by Shirley C. Guthrie Jr ...

Well, Christian Doctrine speaks about the general theology of Christianity (obviously), albeit from a Reformed point of view. However, rather than Guthrie writing strictly from a Presbyterian point of view, he instead explains the "Reformed" view is more of a theology, something that any Christian from any denomination can follow and preach.
