As Vivian explains in various monologues, irony is also a major theme in Donne's work, which is concerned with life's "big questions" like death and God, but usually ends up losing itself in its own wit and intellectual quandaries. Narrating the play also allows Vivian to present flashbacks of her life.

Wit by Margaret Edson Plot Summary | LitCharts

I first saw the play Wit (it is actually "W;t") in a tiny theater in Philadelphia. I was left speechless at the end, and it lived in my head for weeks. This play is an extraordinary effort for a first time writer. As a nurse, the story of Vivian Bearing, to me, is a story of kindness, and the lack of it.

If we were writing a script for a movie instead of a play, we might choose the fifth option. The film opens with a crocodile peeling Charming's crown off his head, much as you might remove a scrap of foil wrapper from a bonbon, before taking a luscious bite. Then the movie flashes back to show a shocked audience the story of how Charming ended ...
